Govt Urged To Concern On Development In Aqua Business

Malaysia's fisheries are facing unprecedented pressure, with the decline in supply and demand affecting the industry's profitability. The government is urged to take action to ensure the sustainability of the aqua business.

The government must address the issue of declining fishery productivity. The number of fish caught is decreasing, and the size of the fish is getting smaller. This is causing a problem for fishermen and the entire industry.

The government is urged to take the necessary steps to preserve the aqua industry's sustainability. This includes the allocation of funds for research and development, as well as providing support for fishermen to adopt modern fishing techniques.
